

You've found a sick or injured seabird?

- Only try to help if it is safe for you to do so.
- If you are unsure about what to do, ring for help (See phone numbers below).
- Avoid chasing the bird.
- Limit handling to what is strictly necessary.
- Use a towel or large cotton cloth to cover the bird entirely. If the bird can't see you, it won't bite you.
 - ➔ Keep the head covered at all times.
 - ➔ Keep the head held away from you.
- Do not hold its beak closed. If you do, it will not be able to breathe.
- Scoop the bird up and place it in a cardboard box.
 - ➔ Make sure the box is a suitable size for the bird. The bird should be able to sit comfortably, turn around, and stretch out its neck.
 - ➔ Air flow around the bird is very important. Seabirds are very prone to overheating.
 - ➔ Place 2 or 3 towels in the bottom of the box.
 - ➔ Ensure there is ventilation in the top of the box, NOT the sides.
- Remove the covering from the bird, starting at the tail end and finishing with uncovering the head. Step away quickly so that the bird cannot bite you.
- Do not offer the bird anything to eat or drink.
- Keep the bird in a QUIET DARK place.
- Ring for help.
